BRITAIN FACES GREAT PERIL IN NEXT 48 HOURS BUT HITLER WILL DECIDE WHEN TIME IS 'RIPE'

Senate Votes Government Power Over Factories

Barbour Is Convinced Of Sabotage

New Jersey Senator Says 'Foreign Agents' Are Responsible for Blast at Kenvil

48 Persons Die

Toll Mounts Today as Agencies Continue to Investigate

Kenvil, N. J., Sept. 4 (AP)—Activities of "foreign agents" were blamed today by Senator Barbour (R-NJ) for the explosions at the Hercules Powder Company that killed at least 48 and within five frightful minutes blasted more than a score of buildings off the 2,000 acre plant.

While state police checked membership rolls of the German-American Bund against the roster of plant employees, Senator Barbour in a statement in Washington said he believed "when the facts are known, it will be discovered that it (Thursday's explosion) was due as in the case of the Black Tom (Jersey City, N. J.) disaster of the pre-World War period to the activities of "foreign agents."

Probes Continue

In addition to the New Jersey state police and state bureau of explosives, other agencies probing the mysterious explosions were the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Hercules experts, Army and Navy intelligence officers and United States Navy explosive specialists from the powder factory at Indian Head, Md.

None of the many investigators would say whether they had unearthed any evidence of sabotage.

Three names increased the death toll to 48 as steam shovels and cranes this morning began clearing away the twisted steel, powder-smudged brick and other debris that piled up in the terrible blasts of Thursday afternoon.

Everett Dunn, 19, died in the Dover General Hospital and bodies of Frederick McConnell, 20, and John Andico, 27, were added to the total killed at the scene.

Although scores had been treated and released, 70 persons remained in hospitals.

Additions Are Feared

It was among these injured that additions to the death roster were feared, but gangs of fellow workers still dug in the ruins of some 20 buildings to make certain whether all bodies had been recovered.

The dynamite factory was the only building left in workable condition by the blasts which swept the powder units. Officials of the company announced work would be resumed here Monday. Shattered windows were replaced today.

Throughout the many acres of the plant men used hand tools and steam shovels to clear the way for reconstruction.

Working on big defense orders, the company said it would do all possible to restore normal operations.

Reconstruction Moves

Reconstruction extended through Kenvil, Dover and other communities. Buildings more than half a mile distant had been hit by flying pieces of steel weighing as much as 500 pounds. Glaziers could not meet the demand for their services.

Agreement Is Reached

An agreement has been reached between the contractor and union officials in a labor dispute at Shaft 5 in Plattkill, and work has been resumed on the New York city water project where there was some delay when a dispute arose over the dismissal of two drillers. Some 40 men working in the heading quit work in sympathy Wednesday but work was resumed when the company and union officials settled their differences.

Bail Forfeited

Mrs. Vera Kingston Goodman of this city, charged with passing a stop sign and driving with four adults in the front seat earlier in the week, forfeited bail when the case was called in police court. It was stated today she had posted $2 bail on the stop sign charge and $3 on the other.

Industrial Issue Gets Sharp Teeth

Senate Still Faced With Two Potential Controversies Hinging Upon Age Range and Delay in Draft but No Great Fight Is Anticipated; Passage Today Fully Expected

Washington, Sept. 14 (AP)—Enactment of the nation's first peacetime draft bill became a matter of hours today after a vehemently arguing Senate voted 37 to 33 late last night to give the government power to take over industrial plants when necessary to get defense orders filled.

Both the House and Senate agreed to meet at noon an hour earlier than usual and leaders said that before the day was over the measure calling for registration of all male citizens 21 through 35 would be ready for President Roosevelt's signature.

Nazis Have Tried Bove Says They Failed

New York, Sept. 14 (AP)—Dr. Charles F. Bove, 52-year-old American surgeon just returned from 25 years residence in Paris, says several unsuccessful attempts have been made to land German armed forces on Britain's shores.

(In London a military source told the Associated Press that "absolutely no attempt at invasion in any size, shape or form" had been made by Nazi forces.)

Arriving yesterday from Lisbon, Portugal, aboard the American export liner Excambion, Dr. Bove declared "the Germans have tried the invasion several times at different points and each time they failed."

In addition, the surgeon told of having seen hundreds of German bodies in the waters near Cherbourg, France.

(Although the British denied any invasion attempts, the censor passed Dr. Bove's story for publication in Great Britain.)

(The London military source said it was possible a German transport ship had been bombed or torpedoed and that this might account for German bodies in the waters near Cherbourg.)

Draftees Will Get Pertinent List of Personal Queries

Questionnaire to Be Most Searching; Data Will Determine Fitness of All Conscripts

Washington, Sept. 14 (AP)—The prospective draftee's first weapon will be a well-sharpened pencil or a well-filled pen.

And his first order under the compulsory military service program due to become law in a few days will be to attack a questionnaire more lengthy than an income tax blank and as searching as a census-taker's list of inquiries.

By this means, assuming Congress finally approves a 21 through 35 age range, the government expects hundreds of local draft boards to find out how many of the 16,500,000 male citizens in that age group will be eligible and qualified for military service.

The questions number more than 100. They ask everything from the state of health of a man's wife to whether he himself is in jail. Not all of them will have to be answered by any one registrant, but only those which apply in his case.

The questionnaire will be distributed soon after registration and will have to be returned in five days. On the basis of the replies the local selective service boards will arrange the classifications of potential conscripts. For example, if a man's wife was an invalid and he was her sole support, he obviously would be qualified for deferment.

Confidently, Leaders Predicted That Despite Outcroppings of Opposition the Age Span Provided Would Remain Unchanged and the Delay Proposal Would Not Be Restored to the Bill from Which It Was Removed Earlier This Week by a Senate-House Conference Committee.

Once the senate had finished with the measure it was slated to go to the house where Rep. Cooper of Tennessee, acting Democratic leader, had obtained unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The senate vote on the plant seizure controversy came on a motion by Senator Neely (D-WVa) to send the entire bill back to the conference committee with instructions to the senate conferees to substitute the industrial provision voted by the house for a compromise of original senate and house provisions which the committee had recommended.

The 11 senators and representatives quickly gathered in a nearby committee room and adopted the house provision.

By this time, however, the senate had quit for the night, and the house, which had been waiting in recess for several hours for the senate to pass the legislation in time for final action about midnight, had adjourned.

Must Accept Order

The 600-word section which the committee accepted on senate instructions, and which thereupon became a part of the bill provided, in principle, that once the President (Continued on Page 12)

Scalise Is Found Guilty of Stealing

Conviction Returned Upon Five Counts, Including Forgery and Larceny

New York, Sept. 14 (AP)—George Scalise, former president of the Building Service Employees' International Union (AFL), was convicted early today on five counts of an indictment accusing him of stealing $9,662.27 of the union's funds.

A general sessions court jury, after deliberating for 17 and three-quarters hours, reported convictions on four counts of third degree forgery and on one count of grand larceny. The jury could not agree on five remaining counts of grand larceny.

Scalise faces a maximum sentence of five years on each forgery count and ten years on the grand larceny charge.

Originally the indictment contained 60 counts, but the number was reduced to 10 during the trial.

Arrested in his New York hotel room last April 21, the squat, 43-year-old union boss of 70,000 building service workers was indicted five days later on charges of conspiracy and extortion. The (Continued on Page 12)

State Health Department Approves Sanitary Sewers for Many City Streets

Approval of the state health department, which had been withheld for some time, was received yesterday by the board of public works for the construction of sanitary sewers in Ridge street, Valentine Place, Pearl street, Marius street, Glen street and East Union street. Work of constructing these sewers now awaits the approval of the WPA at Albany.

The sewers approved by the state health department, it was stated yesterday, were but a few of many sewers in the city-wide sewer WPA project that the city has submitted.

Mayor C. J. Heiselman, who presided at the meeting of the public works board, said that the per-

Willkie Starts Long Campaign Tour

Beginning a campaign tour which will take him through the midwest to the Pacific coast and back, Wendell Willkie, Republican presidential nominee, (in gray hat, in car) got this enthusiastic welcome from sympathizers on his arrival in Chicago. He shakes hands with well wishers on the first stop of his 7,000-mile trip.

Willkie Is Given Rousing Reception In Chicago's Loop

Pledges More Jobs With Economic Improvement, Opposes Political Bosses in Talks

Chicago, Sept. 14 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie, his voice husky from rapid-fire speechmaking, today followed up an eight-hour campaign tour of Chicago's teeming streets with a swing into the heart of the corn belt.

In contrast to his appearances yesterday before steel and stockyard workers and a noisy, confetti-throwing crowd downtown, the Republican presidential nominee's week-end schedule called for brief train stops in downstate Illinois and southeastern Iowa.

He was expected, however, to reiterate generally the theme of his talks here—a pledge of more jobs through economic improvement, a demand for a strong defense.

Knox Calls U. S. Fleet 'Greatest' in World

Secretary of Navy Views Pacific Branch and Is Convinced; Sees Need for Planes

Honolulu, Sept. 14 (AP)—Intensive study of the United States fleet in action has convinced Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox it is the "greatest" in the world.

Secretary Knox, seated last night in a hotel room from whose window he could see a portion of the fleet at anchor in Pearl Harbor, spoke with quiet conviction: "The United States has the greatest, the most powerful, and the most effective fleet on the high seas anywhere in the world."

The secretary had just returned from a five-day inspection of the fleet during war exercises far at sea.

Praises Personnel

"The fleet personnel, both enlisted men and officers, is the intense pride of every American citizen who loves his country," he said.

Secretary Knox flew to Honolulu from the U.S.S. Enterprise 40 miles at sea yesterday. He said his inspection of naval facilities in this area had extended not more than 150 miles, indicating he had not visited outlying islands.

He described spectacular maneuvers of the fleet and said he was aboard a destroyer which was "sunk" in a night engagement with a battleship.

Both the navy and the army need more and better bombing planes, Secretary Knox said. More and better anti-aircraft defenses also are needed both at Lahaina Roads and Pearl Harbor, he added.

Press Is Informed London Must Quit Or Face Bombings

Spokesmen Declare Raids Have Been Retaliatory; One-Third of Arms Stored in Capital

Berlin, Sept. 14 (AP)—London will be bombed relentlessly unless it surrenders, a well-informed source told foreign newspaper men today.

This spokesman declared that one-third of England's war potentials are stored within the British capital, as well as 46 percent of the nation's imports, and that the city therefore is a military objective of the first magnitude.

"No city of the future will be built along London's lines," he said.

"The attack on London was undertaken as a measure of retaliation for months of planless bombing of German civilians and non-military objects by the British," this source insisted.

They're Not Quits

"The British apparently now think because they haven't bombed Germany in the past two nights we are, therefore, quits. They apparently look at it like a football match where an error on one side is evened up by an error on the other.

"You can't figure human values that way. One German life may be worth ten British lives and more. The fact is, the German people were challenged by continuing (Continued on Page Nine)

Group May Rule On Roosevelt Trip

Verdict on Nature of Labor Day Tour

Washington, Sept. 14 (AP)—The special senate committee appointed to police this year's elections was faced today with the prospect of deciding formally the question raised by Republican leaders as to whether President Roosevelt's speaking trip over Labor Day week-end was "political."

Rep. Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican national committee, asked the senate group to find out who paid the expenses for the presidential train and to determine whether these costs should come within the $3,000,000 limit on presidential campaign expenditures imposed by the Hatch politics act.

Chairman Gillette (D-Ia) said he would place a letter from Martin before the five-member committee at a closed session.

Reports on Padding

He announced also he would submit reports by committee investigators on complaints of "padding voting registration lists" in Hudson county, New Jersey, and Wilmington, Del.

Gillette invited Martin to appear before the committee but the Republican chairman declared he would be unable to do so and that his letter would present his views.

Hitler, Mussolini Are Trying Most Difficult Military Moves in History

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

You and I are in the same position today as the British government, our attention being divided between Hitler's threatened invasion of Britain across the milling waters of the English Channel and Mussolini's proposed assault on Egypt over the killing wastes of the desert—both ranking among the most difficult military operations of all time.

I mention this distraction because it represents an important element of the axis strategy—making the British defend themselves on two vital fronts at once. However, while Il Duce's man-

Civilians Resent What They Consider Attacks on Monarchs

(By The Associated Press)

Neutral military observers predicted that the next 48 hours would be a period "of intense danger of invasion to Britain" as the Nazi air force rounded out a week of steady mass attacks on London today.

An authorized German spokesman said, however, that Adolf Hitler alone would determine when Britain is "ripe for the final assault."

Cautioning against the futility of speculation on "Nazi time schedules," the spokesman said Hitler would "not be hurried" in setting the zero hour for the long-threatened invasion.

While Nazi military circles contended their aerial preparation was well in hand, Britain still stoutly resisted.

Shifting of Defenses

The Germans said a sign of the growing effectiveness of their raids was the shifting of most of Britain's air defenses to the London area, thus leaving the rest of Britain more open to assault.

The British, however, told of meeting the German raiders with a veritable aerial "minefield" of anti-aircraft shells.

Dropping of German bombs in west and southwest London was acknowledged, with the Germans coming over at 10 to 15-minute intervals, but no reports of serious or widespread damage were made.

Commenting on the German bombing of Buckingham Palace yesterday, the London Daily Mail declared editorially that attempts to assassinate heads of states were part of the calculated policy of what it called "The Berlin Barbarians."

A time bomb exploded in front of Buckingham Palace today and demolished a huge gatepost and a section of iron fencing.

The missile presumably was dropped yesterday when five other bombs fell on the palace and grounds.

The explosion occurred several hours before more than 60 reporters began an officially conducted inspection tour of the damage caused in yesterday's raid.

The Germans said bombs dropped "in the vicinity of" the royal palace were aimed at oil storage tanks, but the Mail compared the bombing to attacks allegedly directed at King Haakon of Norway and Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands during Nazi invasion of those countries.

The German object, it said, was "to destroy every rallying point of national sentiment and character and to reduce civilized peoples to the ghastly mould of the Nazi robots."

On the African front, thousands of Italian troops were reported moving up to the Libyan-Egyptian frontier, giving rise to speculation on the imminence of a possible offensive against the land of the Nile.

Rumania's new dictator, General Ion Antonescu, decreed the supervision of commerce and industry in that country by state commissioners who must be of "ethnically pure" Rumanian stock.

Observers said he apparently was seeking to make good on his announced determination to run the country without interference from any political group—something of a problem, since he took charge without organized backing.

Carol, the king he deposed, paused at Sitges, Spain, with his woman friend, Magda Lupescu. The couple was expected to continue to Portugal after several days.

Defeated France, struggling to solve serious economic and political problems engendered by a disastrous war, fears that the Germans may take over the entire country within a few weeks, travelers returning from the unoccupied zone declared today.

Swiss leaders also were said to be concerned over the prospect of German control of the entire French-Swiss border, now the only link between Switzerland and the (Continued on Page Nine)

Taft and Bridges To Campaign for Wendell Willkie

New York, Sept. 14.—(Special)—United States Senators Robert A. Taft of Ohio and H. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire head the list of out-of-state speakers thus far selected to carry the Willkie-for-President drive to New York state.

Announcement that the two United States Senators will speak in this state was made today by Republican State Chairman Edwin F. Jaekle after a conference with Majority Leader Irving M. Ives of the Assembly, who heads the State Committee's speakers bureau.

Senator Taft's itinerary is still being worked out. Mr. Jaekle said, but present plans call for him to spend a major part of a ten-day eastern speaking tour during October in New York state.

The first speech by Senator Bridges will be at Middletown, October 6.

The state chairman pointed out that the signal for moving the state campaign into high gear will be Mr. Willkie's speech before the Republican State Convention at White Plains, September 28.

Out-of-state speakers who will come into New York during the campaign, besides the two senators, include Representative Carl Mundt of South Dakota, Representative Dewey Short of Missouri and Representative Ralph O. Brewster, United States Senator-elect in Maine.

All three members of Congress have distinguished themselves as speakers in and out of the House of Representatives, Mr. Jaekle pointed out.

In keeping with the crusading spirit which marks the conduct of the Willkie campaign, the state committee has made a special effort to get forceful speakers, Mr. Jaekle added. "We can use some of the firebrand style of oratory in these days of crisis."

Representative Mundt will speak at Southampton, L. I., September 14. Other speaking dates for the Congressional group will be announced later.

The State Chairman and Mr. Ives both made it plain that other out-of-state speakers are expected to aid the Willkie drive in this state as it rolls along at a constantly accelerated speed.

"Nor will we be lacking in speakers from our own ranks in this state," said Mr. Ives.

He listed Mr. Willkie himself and District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey at the head of the state's own speakers. Legislators and congressmen will also take part. Mr. Ives emphasizes that efforts of his bureau will be directed as much at the election of the state and local tickets as at capturing the state for the Willkie-McNary ticket. Insofar as possible, there will be equal emphasis upon all candidates, he said.

Legislators will speak in districts adjacent to their own as well as their home district under a plan worked out by Mr. Ives.

Mr. Jaekle added a word of praise for Mr. Ives' work in organizing the speakers bureau.

"It is particularly well qualified for this job," said Mr. Jaekle. "He knows the upstate area thoroughly as well as the political problems of the state as a whole. His division opened up the day after Labor Day and we are under way a month earlier than usual."

Ducky Idea

Pierre, S. D. (AP)—Game Warden George Woods used a new technique to lure ducks to a pond by a drying pot hole. The mother couldn't move the brood through dense weeds separating her home from a nearby pond. So Woods had a farmer mow a swath through the tangle. Mother and ducklings waddled right down the lane to the next pond.

Discovery of Unusual Blue Gave Carl Walters New Career

Beads Exhibited At Metropolitan Won His Interest

Rare Color Is Reproduced After Many Experiments and Artist Became Ceramic Sculptor

A color literally stopped an artist in his tracks one day at the Metropolitan Museum in New York and that pause represented the climax of a career which has brought him to a place all his own in the art world.

It was a significant, fateful color and one which seemed to transmit the spell of ancient Egypt to a modern world and with it came a challenge to a man who had been well along with his career as a painter.

That man was Carl Walters, noted ceramic sculptor who lives at Woodstock and that color was a blue of rich quality found only in ceramics made along the Nile centuries ago.

"That color fascinated me," the sculptor exclaimed, "and I became possessed with an almost uncontrollable urge to reproduce it."

It was a haunting experience, he indicated, and he left the museum like a man who had been given a direct assignment by one of the ancient Pharaohs.

Had No Idea

"I decided to try to make that blue," he recalled, "and at that time I had no idea what I would do with it when it was made."

Least among this artist's thoughts at the outset of his interesting experiment, he said, were any intentions of applying this color to pottery or to such pieces of ceramic sculpture as he produces today. Neither did he think of attempting to reproduce that string of beads in the museum on which he had first seen this rare color.

"I knew nothing of pottery," he confessed, "but I began reading everything on the subject of ceramics with the hope of discovering the secret of that fascinating blue."

The color came as he wanted after 11 months of research and experimenting.

Was Excellent Glaze

"It turned out to be an excellent glaze," he related, "but my job after its discovery was to decide just how to use it."

To use it as the Egyptians had used it seemed an appropriate solution to that problem, however, and as the art world knows today Mr. Walters has made excellent use of his favorite color in his pottery pieces and works in sculpture.

The blue is a virtual borderline hue between brilliant blue and green. Blue is always favored in its character but there are times when its green shows through like reflected foliage in a placid lake.

It was about 20 years ago when the efforts of Mr. Walters recurred this color for a modern world and since then he has gained outstanding recognition in the art world.

Was Born In South

This artist was born in Fort Madison, La., June 19, 1883. He attended Minneapolis Art School from 1905 to 1907 and the Chase School of Art and Robert Henri School of Art in New York during 1908 and 1909 and was married to Helen Lawrence at Minneapolis in 1912.

Mr. Walters designed and executed glass doors in the Whitney Museum, New York. He is represented by other works in that museum, the Metropolitan Museum, Chicago Art Institute, Museum of Modern Art, New York, Minneapolis Institute of Arts and at museums in Detroit, Portland, Ore., Cincinnati and Davenport, La.

In 1936 and 1937, Mr. Walters was awarded the Guggenheim fellowship. He is a member of the Painters, Gravers and Sculptors and the Woodstock Art Association.

After completing his preliminary art education, the artist traveled back and forth across the country before settling down to his experiment with blue and one of the most interesting phases of his career came in 1919 while he and Mrs. Walters were living in Portland, Ore., where Mr. Walters had been painting for five years.

Decided to Move

They decided to move to New York but found themselves without the necessary fare and here's where blue came in again as a fateful color.

This experiment with blue, preceded that of his later venture with ceramics, however, but despite the success resulting from this accidental discovery, it was not as impressive to the artist as his first glimpse at the color he now uses in his ceramics.

Mutton fat and cobalt blue had their day in the Walters home when as more or less of a casual experiment he mixed the two together and then poured the mixture into paper candle moulds.

The result was blue candles and this idea was not originally intended to go beyond the Walters

A Message in Color From Egypt Brought These

Artists have been known throughout the ages to be influenced by many things contemporary and historic and sometimes the influences have been many in a single career. It is not that way with Carl Walters, ceramic sculptor of Woodstock, who was converted from painting to his present work through the fascination of a color produced centuries ago in the ancient country of the Nile. Some beads in blue

studio. A woman, who stopped by one day, saw them, however, and wanted a pair. Then the curator of the Portland Museum saw them and asked for a pair and soon one demand followed another for the candles.

They sold for $1.50 a pair and soon enough money came to the Walters for that trip to New York. This came after Portland's largest department store contracted for the entire output of the Walters candles which were selling then at from $1.50 to $8.00 a pair.

At about the time of his first major order for the candles the artist bought brass tubes and soldered them in batteries of 12 for faster production. He also then substituted wax for mutton fat.

When they were ready for their New York trip, the Walters had $600 clear of their fare for a start in the big city where the artist soon arrived at the turning point in his career.

Candles in New York

The two found $800 and New York an unsafe combination, and the artist decided to do something about it. He took a walk, but it was a jog along that street of streets, Fifth avenue, and within one hour he had sold 100 worth of candles to shops there.

Soon a wholesaler appeared in the picture with a proposal for exclusive rights. Then came a device made by the artist for faster production. Also came Wamakers who found the colored candles a worth-while proposition and finally came the chain stores who devised a way the Egyptian ultimately sold so cheaply that it put an end to this interesting phase of an artist's career.

It was just about at the time when the candle idea had spent itself, however, that Mr. Walters came upon the blue which changed his direction as an artist. His color was on Egyptian beads in the Metropolitan, and perhaps they had fascinated no visitor there, as they did this artist.

"I discovered that the Egyptian glaze was an alkaline," he explained. "The blue was made by using some form of copper like malakite or hammer scale."

The building of pottery furnaces was as much a part of the experiment as anything else to this artist, but he constructed what he called "a small beehive affair of my own design." Later he built a better furnace of fire brick insulated on the outside with asbestos. He also substituted a seven-inch burner for the bunsen burner which had not given sufficient temperature.

Many Experiments

For many weeks small two-inch high crucibles were filled with mixtures of soda flint and varying amounts of black oxide of copper, but day after day these carefully weighted mixtures produced nothing but a dirty lava color.

Once, however, a faint line of blue, showed along the rim of a crucible and this was his first important cue. He decided that the furnace was not getting enough air and as he introduced more air his formulae came out either blue or greenish blue without fail.

The artist made frequent trips to the Metropolitan Museum to compare his colors with those produced by the Egyptians in the beads there. They finally matched and he had gained the secret of a color, which probably had never been duplicated since the first made. But then I had to decide what to do with it," he related, "and the only answer I could find was to become a potter."

A friend offered him the use of an old grist mill at Cornish, N. H., and there he built a workable kiln and made a potter's wheel for a serious start on his new career.

Painting Put Aside

Painting was definitely put aside for ceramics in the New Hampshire studio. He had some difficulty in making the glaze stick to the native red clay but this difficulty was surmounted and he began to make progress.

By the end of that first summer as a potter Mr. Walters had enough finished work to hold an exhibition and sale and he earned enough to take himself and wife back to New York.

Again in the big city, the artist who was now a potter, made a fresh start at earning a living. A plumber's shop below his apartment allowed ready access to materials for which he had immediate need.

This time it was candle sticks instead of candles which gained his attention and a pair he made sold for $40 to an interior decorator on Madison avenue. Then he made a large mirror for Mr. Tumulty, President Wilson's secretary, and many other such objects followed, all of which helped to pay the rent until he was able to get an effective start with his pottery.

Fire brick, removed from a bakery across from his apartment, helped solve the furnace idea and a small kiln was built in a back-room fireplace. At that time, however, he had no potter's wheel and all the pieces had to be cast in moulds, which he had made and brought with him from New Hampshire.

Sold at Once

"Luck was with me again," he explained, in telling of his first sales in New York to small gift shops along Madison avenue. "In a few hours my first stock was sold completely and then I sold every piece as quickly as I could make it."

It was in the spring of that first year as a potter when Mr. Walters first came to Woodstock. He built a large outdoor furnace fired with faggots and then came the first piece of sculpture, a cat with kittens.

This work was in terra cotta about three inches long and was bought by Peggy Bacon, now a famous artist and author. Many animals were made from then on and hundreds of pieces of pottery produced.

Within a short time after Mr. Walters moved to Woodstock he had completed a permanent pottery studio and was adequately equipped for what he had decided was his life work. His first public showing was at the Whitney Studio Club in 1924 and his first one-man show was at Dudsons Galleries in New York in 1927. The Downtown Galleries now handle his work.

Works in sculpture made by this famous resident of Ulster county now sell at from $150 to $1,000 and he continues doing everything possible with his favorite color which is known generally as the "Walters Blue."

Experiments continue in the Walters studio and as he explains, "I'm trying always to improve on the quality and texture of that blue."

Many works in various other colors are also produced by this ceramist and a number of them are in striking color combinations. The blue, however, is something which others have been unable to duplicate, although many have tried since his discovery in 1921.

His work sold best, he said, from 1921 to 1931 and his sales reached their highest point in the latter year. His work is still in demand, however, and an exhibit at his Woodstock studio two summers ago netted $500 in 10 days.

Fired Twice

Every piece turned out is fired twice, the first or "biscuit" firing lasting for five hours and the second glaze firing for three hours. The first firing is at 2,000 degrees fahrenheit and the second at 1,800. All glazes are produced by himself in his own studio.

His work has allowed time for himself and wife to travel a bit and within recent years he went to the West Indies and within the past year to the Bahamas. He is undecided this year whether or not to remain in Woodstock or go back to the city for the winter, but he has stayed the year-around in the local art colony and liked it.

All of his interesting pieces of sculpture are produced without model.

"I start with a clear mental conception," he explained, "and begin at once to realize it in clay. I am not interested in literal representations." He gets much fun out of his work and perhaps most of all he enjoys a permanent companionship with that blue which caught his eye like a message from the past and built for him a most interesting future.

The moon is approximately 240,000 miles from earth.

Satisfaction

Louisville, Ky.—Bernie R. Meidinger of Louisville is one of those fellows who's proud of a receipt for speeding.

In Indiana the other day, Meidinger was arrested by a state policeman and haled before a judge who fined him $1 and costs of $5.

The receipt was signed:

"Jesse James, magistrate."

Perfect Score

Dunn, N. C.—Farmer J. J. Parker bought his children a bicycle.

He went riding and broke a leg. His little daughter tried out the wheel the next day and broke her nose. His son hopped on it next and started for the family groceries.

He fell and broke an arm.

Cooperation

Topeka, Kas.—When prowlers entered the First Methodist Church they found the safe door wide open.

"We've had so many burglaries," an official explained, "that we leave the safe open."

"Of course, there was no money."

He Needs Room

Point Barrow, Alaska—Charlie Brower, grizzled veteran of the Arctic who recalls that once he was the only white man north of Nome, would like to move.

The census shows 25 white residents. That is the largest in the history of Barrow, the farthest North American community.

Brower declares "it's getting too crowded."

But there's no place further north to go.

Uninvited Guests

Omaha—Alice, the lady lion at Riverside Park zoo, foiled Park Commissioner Roy Towl's economy efforts.

Towl disposed of two lions to cut feed costs.

Alice more than cancelled his work. She gave birth to four lion cubs.

"And just when fresh meat prices are climbing out of sight," Towl moaned.

Sports Hazards

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—At least two wives in the Cedar Rapids area are urging their mates to abandon their present hobbies for something safer—like stamp collecting.

Mrs. Melba Olson, 31, of Newhall, Ia., stood too close while her husband was swinging a golf club. Result: A fractured skull.

Mrs. Guy Miller, 34, Cedar Rapids, stood too close while her husband was casting. Result: A fishhook caught in her scalp.

Best 'Convincer'

Denver (AP)—The surgeon told Oliver Woodard, Sr., that the time to have your tonsils out was in early fall, after you had stored some summer health in your body. He must have been convincing, because five members of the Woodard family went to the hospital together.

A New York World's Fair goodwill truck paid a visit to Kingston yesterday. The sound truck, one of three units now making a 14,000-mile tour of eight eastern states to remind persons within hearing distance that the fair will close on October 27, arrived in the city about noon and proceeded to the city hall, where Mayor C. J. Heiselman signed a large scroll. John W. Goddard, of Douglaston, L. I., left, and Chris Mourier of Astoria, L. I., were in command.

GET FIRE ON THE RUN

Here's a date to mark on your calendar—October 6 to 12.

During that period, Fire Prevention Week will be observed this year. And that week isn't something to idly notice, then forget. Fire Prevention Week is carried on for you and for all the other people of this country. It is carried on for your business, and every other man's business. It marks an intensive effort to awaken the American people to the terrible waste fire leaves behind it and to show how fire can be conquered.

Fire Prevention Week is far more than usually important this year. Today, largely due to the rearmament drive, industrial production is on the upward curve, and is slated to go rapidly higher as the drive gains impetus. And the record shows that the danger of fire increases as production increases. That means that fire, if not controlled, can be a very real danger to our defense plans. It takes an intricate industrial machine to make the weapons we need today—all the agencies of manufacture, transportation and assembly must work with the precision of pistons. One bad fire in one key factory might delay for months the production of weapons which we sorely lack.

On top of that, special precautions must be taken against the arsonist and the saboteur as our experience in other times of crisis grimly proves. Authorities expect efforts to sabotage the defense program and fire is always regarded as a handy weapon by the purposeful destroyer.

Fire Prevention Week should be observed by all of us—by every man and woman able to read and listen and learn. This is one place where all, old and young, can be of great aid to the national defense program. Do your part!

FARMING AND LIVING

The Rural New Yorker, looking for a typical farm family to honor at the World's Fair, has made some thrilling discoveries. As neighbors send in their nominations they describe the people they recommend. They tell of modest farms, mostly with less than 100 acres of land, but self-sufficient and producing something more than food crops.

These people who handle farms profitably send sons and daughters to college. They live well-rounded lives, with culture and recreation going hand in hand with agriculture. There are mothers who play the church organ, children who make up small family orchestras, families who sing together and who go to town to attend good concerts.

The elders are active in granges, the youngsters in junior farm clubs. The fathers are on township school boards or are village officials. They have radios and books and pianos in their homes. They live graciously.

It is good for city people to learn about their fellow citizens in the rural districts. It is good to know that there are so many farmers of this type in the land. The tragedies of sub-marginal areas, share-croppers, poor tenantry, and so on, offer urgent problems which must be faced and solved, but the happier farm picture needs to be presented, too.

CAPSULES AND PYRAMIDS

That famous "time capsule" that has aroused so much interest, serious and cynical, is to be buried at last in New York. It is expected to show posterity, several millenniums hence, how antiquity lived and what it did and knew and thought. And that very thing may happen as planned, although we'd say offhand that it would require a remarkable degree of luck for such a store of relics to be dug up as per schedule, by the hypothetical inhabitants of that distant time.

It doesn't seem quite so crazy when you think of the ancient Egyptians. They may have had much the same sort of idea. In their burial tombs they filed away all sorts of relics and information of their times. They are supposed to have done it primarily to help the departed souls on their journey to wherever they were bound, but that purpose alone wouldn't explain the vast pyramids they piled up over the heads of the deceased.

The Egyptians made sure of posterity's attention by the enormous and indestructible monuments they reared over their time capsules. Our American capsule-projectors should add a pyramid to their project.

DEFENSE

An American newspaper cartoon shows two men discussing the war situation. One of them is saying: "You'd think, after all the warning those people had over there, they'd have been better prepared." The other man replies, "Wouldn't you? But of course we have plenty of time."

Have we? Americans are not so sure of that as they were a few months ago. Even with the notable improvement in British morale and fighting spirit, the assault of Hitler's air war is so severe and continuous that we cannot tell yet. Independent diplomats and business observers at Washington have been giving Britain a fifty-fifty chance of winning. That means only an even chance of the British Empire surviving. It is none too reassuring for a nation like ours, which has so long lived snugly, and only half aware of it, under the informal protection of British sea power. Britain has had a close call, and so might we.

It is time to stop dawdling and quarrelling and playing politics, and to concentrate on the big job of national defense.

BLOOD FOR BRITAIN

The chief of the British army blood-transfusion service is said to have asked the American Red Cross to send over 10,000 pints of blood in the next four weeks. It would represent 20,000 donors and would be meant for wounded soldiers.

That is a lot of blood. It would weigh several tons. We may assume that it will be sent and that it will save thousands of lives. Perhaps some of it is going across the sea right now. If so, it will be saving women and children as well as soldiers. There must be ample use for it in the London bombardment.

Such a service at a time like this might be symbolic as well as practical. There are still strong ancestral and racial ties between Britain and America, in spite of formal separation for a century and a half, and in spite of the rich infusion of other racial stocks here. Today, with the rest of the world drifting away from us, these old bonds are tightening up. Politically we continue separate, merely cooperating along parallel lines for mutual safety. But some will see a sort of mystical reunion in the blood transfusions.

The question now is, will Hitler land on England or will England land on Hitler?

REDUCING DIETS MAY CAUSE EYE DEFECTS

Whenever you begin to worry about your diet, as to whether you are getting enough of the various foodstuffs and particularly vitamins and minerals, it would be well to remember the advice of an outstanding food authority, Dr. J. B. McCollum, Johns Hopkins University. All that is necessary is to eat your usual everyday foods—meat, vegetables, fruits and dairy products—and you will get all the necessary foodstuffs including minerals and vitamins.

For years health authorities and health writers have been advising overweight people to get rid of their excess fat as hospital records and insurance statistics prove that excess weight is a liability to health. This advice has been timely and has caused a decrease in heart and blood vessel disease, diabetes, acute infectious disease, and lessened the risks in surgical operations.

However, when the craze for "slimness" swept the country, many who were of normal weight went on severe reducing diets with the result that a number of cases of collapse occurred and some developed the severe type of goitre.

That reducing diets can affect the eyes is pointed out by Dr. Wm. Than, Boston, in the Canadian Medical Journal. Dr. Than cites a number of cases where whitish, yellowish, grayish and reddish spots occurred in the eyes following reducing diets in which weight was lost very rapidly. These spots are due to lack of certain vitamins—A, B, C, and D—in the diet, all of which are necessary for the health of the tissues of the eyes. And the greatest amount of harm was due to lack of dairy products—milk, butter, cheese, cream—the protective foods.

As reducing diets all advise cutting down on fat foods—cream, butter, fat meats—the lack of certain vitamins, particularly A and D, in the daily diets of these overweight people can be easily understood. If, then, you have been on a reducing diet or have been cutting down on fruits, vegetables or dairy foods and some eye disturbance occurs, do not fail to tell your physician or oculist about your diet. It may explain the spots, beginning cataracts, or partial loss of vision.

Overweight and Underweight

Do you know which foods to increase and which to cut down on to increase or reduce your weight? Which foods are necessary for health at all times? Send today for this helpful booklet by Dr. Barton entitled "Overweight and Underweight" (No. 103). Enclose ten cents with your request to cover cost of handling and mailing and address it to The Bell Library, Post Office Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Y., mentioning the Kingston Daily Freeman.

PITY THE POOR POLITICIAN

Literary Guide

By JOHN SELBY

Some September Fiction

Francis Brett Young has gone back to England after his fictional wanderings in South Africa. He has gone even farther, in a literary sense, because he has returned to that group which has been singing the healing virtues of the famous English countryside for 10 these many centuries.

He takes the head of a large accounting firm—Owen Lucton, 50 and bored—as the subject of his experiment. Owen's wife is more interested in social success than in her husband and his children seem to spend more time scheming to get money out of him than sharing his own and the family like. Owen revolts.

Owen had wanted a "high-powered car" for years, so he bought it and took to the lanes. He lost the car, got into a mess or two, met many and diverse people, and grew spiritually to the point where you'd hardly recognize him. But he has another function in Mr. Young's plan. Owen provides the reason for recreating once again the English scene, and now that so much of it is being blown to dust by Germany, this may be especially worth while.

Jane Hutchens' "John Brown's Cousin" is at the opposite end of the fiction shelf. This is the story of a Missouri boy who saw a friend killed uselessly in a futile quarrel, and vowed never to take life. The War Between the States came along, and Henry remained true to his vow, although it meant losing most of his friends, even his girl. He disappeared into Canada and spent rewarding years as a trapper near Hudson Bay, and he eventually returned to Missouri to fight once more for his beliefs.

Miss Hutchens' book swings through a long arc from pre-war times down to the radio. Mostly it is convincing and it always is solidly written. Roger Verrell's "Troubled Waters" is just as far away from the "usual." Verrell is one of the best men now writing about the sea and the sailors thereon. He can get the surge of it without using too obviously the Masfield-Conrad devices, and usually without sentimentality. This time he is writing about a father and son who sail together for the fishing grounds off Iceland. Verrell sets against the traditional battle with the elements a curious emotional drama in which the mother of the boy is the third angle, and the conflict is between father and son. This is not hammock reading, but it is good reading.

WHAT IT MEANS

Nazis' 'Secret Weapon'

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer

Washington—When the Germans tell you that they have a great surprise in store for use against the British, and the British admit the peak of air war is not yet, it adds up, for the military expert, to the probable use of poison gas in the near future.

And you can bet one gas that's coming will be deadly, almost invisible phosgene.

If the Germans use it first—and they were the first to use chlorine in the World War—air experts expect they will drop it from the sky.

The purpose would not be to decimate the population as so many people seem to think, but to spread panic and fear when panic and fear are already taking hold of the civilian population.

Phosgene would be the favorite for this purpose for these reasons:

1. It is almost invisible, and therefore will have a terrifying effect on civilians subjected to the first attack. People will appear to drop dead like flies for no apparent reason.
2. It is easy to store in bomb-like containers and drop from the air.
3. It is highly adaptable to use in the British Isles at this season, because the atmosphere is often hazy, almost foggy. The thin white cloud of the stuff will be invisible under these conditions.

(Phosgene is no good in very wet weather, for water absorbs and dissipates it more rapidly than air.)

4. The Germans know that the British population has been lax in their use of gas masks.

I have it from well-informed military observers that both the Germans and the British have big stores of gases for use under desperate conditions—the Germans for the peak of their air attack against the islands, and the British to use against land invasion.

As protection, the British authorities have already distributed 30,000,000 gas masks among their

Department of Justice Is Turning Roosevelt's Defense Efforts Into Fumbling Fiasco—Jackson Becomes Literal

By DAVID LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1940)

Washington, Sept. 14—The left hand doesn't know what the right hand is doing in government today. President Roosevelt is trying to assure the country that he is doing everything he can to speed up industrial production and get airplanes built, and the department of justice is throwing more monkey-wrenches into the industrial machinery of the nation.

Attorney General Jackson, who wrote the famous opinion which asked the President of the United States to violate the laws of the land, has announced that it is grossly misrepresenting the so-called Bethlehem cases to say the government was reopening old lawsuits. Mr. Jackson says:

"It has been published in various papers that the government is frightening business and industry into the feeling that they cannot deal with the government in the present emergency on a basis of dependability. We are going to find out through this suit whether any government officer can commit the government to unconscionable profits by a manufacturer. Maybe that will give some point to the Russell-Overton amendment to the selective draft bill."

The attorney general used to know something of the operations of business when he was a public utilities lawyer. He knew then that once a case is closed and the money paid over, it usually required a showing of fraud in order to get a contract reopened. That has been the immemorial tradition of the law.

Today, nearly 22 years after the last World War, the government of the United States, even though the money was paid under the contract, now files a claim to recover what it claims were too large profits. Would Mr. Jackson risk his own money on contracts of that kind and would he find any bank in the country or any investors who would put money in a company which might be a government contract today and be subject at any time in the far distant future to a suit for the recovery of sums paid on the ground that these were "unconscionable"?

The New Dealers, it is being widely inferred, are much more interested in playing politics with defense and making demagogic appeals to class prejudice to help the third-term candidacy than in speeding up defense production by removing obstacles to increased output through the building of new plants and the encouragement of industry.

Congress is passing laws to limit excess profits. But apparently this is not enough. Long after the treasury has collected what is due, the courts are to be asked, whenever the government wishes it, to re-open any case which is already closed.

The Attorney General insists that the present cases he is fighting are necessary to save the government money awarded in a lower court. He stressed his duty to appeal that case and virtually ignored the fact that in another case it was the department's initiative which is carrying to the Supreme Court an effort to overrule what three judges appointed by the New Deal said was a closed case.

Frederick H. Wood, attorney, who is fighting the extraordinary tactics of the Attorney General and who won the famous NRA case in the Supreme Court, says in a brief filed with the Supreme Court:

Carried to its logical conclusion the contention of the government would appear to be that this court, independent of any statutory limitation of profits, should declare that as a matter of law, no government contractor, in time of war or at any other time, no matter what the terms of the contract may be or what benefits may be derived therefrom by the government, may receive or retain any profits in excess of that which the courts shall subsequently determine to be reasonable.

"No authority is cited in support of that startling contention, which, if correct, would transfer the determination of prices in government contracts from the executive to the judicial department and the determination of questions of policy, in respect of such contracts, from the Congress to the courts."

Investors generally are soon to be asked to provide funds to finance defense contracts. Under the securities and exchange laws passed by the New Deal it is stipulated that nobody selling securities may omit any essential or material fact. If Mr. Jackson's point of view is upheld by the Supreme Court, it will mean that prospective investors in advance that they cannot count on their company's retaining any earnings because these must really be set up in reserve for the indefinite future for fear the government under this or any subsequent radical administration may at any time decide to reopen the old contracts and cry "unconscionable profits."

Three New Deal judges in the circuit court of appeals ruled against the attorney general's contentions. That should have ended it. But the opportunity to get headlines by attacking so-called profiteering in the middle of a presidential campaign—even though the contracts were nearly twenty-two years old—was evidently too good to miss, so the solicitor general, who files petitions in the court one day and campaigns on the stump next day against "Willkie" made his pronouncement. And now the attorney general denies the charge about reopened cases as a "falsehood." The records in the court and the briefs filed by opposing counsel show that if the administration is upheld in the supreme court, production will be impaired because nobody will be able to depend on the permanence of a government payment even after it is made. This, like the Russell-Overton amendment, can only lead to nationalization of industry which, while possibly desired by the more communistic minded of the New Dealers, means a loss of valuable time now and the paralysis of the defense program.

If it goes through, we will have our 50,000 planes from five to seven years from now, and the experience of France with her ill-fated radicalism will be repeated. (Reproduction rights reserved).

Sparring Stars Lose 'Arms'

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

Associated Press Science Editor

Cambridge, Mass.—Cosmic clashes—signs of conflict between star systems such as high as the Milky Way—are suggested by some photographs taken by Harvard astronomers.

There are three of these pictures, each showing a nebula—a galaxy of stars comparable in size to the Milky Way and of entirely unusual form.

Instead of being spirals, the common form of star congregations in observable space, these are "one-armed." The usual spiral has two arms, on opposite sides, winding out like pin-wheel flares.

Each of the three has lost one arm. The resulting shape is so striking that the astronomers have dubbed them "ring-tails."

F. Shirley Patterson, in the Bulletin of the Harvard College Observatory, calls attention to the proximity of two of the ring-tails as a possible sign that they came into conflict either with each other, or with some third galaxy. The two "ring-tails" face each other somewhat in the positions of fencers.

Gravitational forces might furnish the dynamic for this kind of celestial disruption.

The control of soil erosion in New York is explained in the new illustrated bulletin E-438. Single copies are free to residents of the state and may be had from the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

Annual Concert Benefits Hospital

The annual concert for the benefit of the Benedictine Hospital as presented Friday evening in the Kingston High School auditorium by Pierre Henrotte and his confreres, Inez Carol Richards, pianist, Horace Britt, cellist and Georges Barrere, flutist, was in the comparable style of the artists who so graciously give of their talents for the musical program each year.

When musicians, who are each fine artists in his own forte combine their efforts in one program, the expected result is one of an unusually pleasing and delightful concert. Such was last evening's program.

The program included works by Handel, Beethoven, Boccherini, Mendelssohn, Widor and Arbos. One of the most charming numbers was the "Sonata in A major" by Boccherini for violinello and piano. Also extremely effective numbers were the first movement from the "D Minor Trio" by Mendelssohn for piano, violin and violinello in which Miss Richards was able to show her abilities as an accomplished pianist and the "Suite for Flute" by Widor played by Mr. Barrere.

The artists also responded with encore at the insistent request of the audience.

At the conclusion of the program the Rev. Austin V. Carey, chaplain of the Benedictine hospital, expressed the appreciation of the hospital staff to the artists for their generosity and to the audience for its continued support.

MEMORY OF THE MOON

by Jeanne Bowman

YESTERDAY: The Cabrillos invite the Taylors to dinner. Pedro observes John's calm persistence and Constance now has no opportunity to explain.

Chapter 26

'Only One Explanation'

THE dance had ended and John had taken her to a remote corner of the room. She couldn't leave him without seeming rude. She had no excuse. No one in the room was interested in her. John had the attitude of a man who had staked a claim and defied anyone to trespass.

Later, tomorrow, after she had talked to Pedro, she would tell John he must not consider her won. She would never marry him. She couldn't tell him here.

Dance after dance in John's arms, or pleading weariness and fatigue, she had managed to elude him. Don and Pedro exchanged glances and Donna.

And then John must ask for his duty dance with his hostess. Pedro was beside her the moment John left. The stringed orchestra started the melody Josefa had sung, and Constance wondered if they could have been prompted by Pedro. His first remark discouraged the thought.

"You might tell Mr. Raskthorne that he doesn't need to act as a bodyguard. No one is going to kidnap you."

"Damn civilization," whispered Constance. For a moment Pedro's arms tightened about her, then relaxed. "Right," he agreed. "Civilized women love with their heads. It looks as though you'd already won your battle."

"Pedro, you don't understand... please, dance back in the shadows... you must give me a chance to explain, I can here."

"There is only one explanation you can give; only one I'll accept. I won't ask you to do it the difficult way, by making an announcement before these people, but, after the others are asleep, meet me outside. We'll take Meg, drive to San Francisco, file our intention to wed, then three days later we'll settle our problem for all time. Will you do this, Michael?"

Settle their question for all time? Constance dared to think of what his plan would mean; the drive south with Pedro, with the right to sit in the curve of his arm. Days in San Francisco, the hilarity of the three of them as Meg took their sightseeing in her beloved home city.

And then, at the end of the three days, their marriage.

But what would it mean? John's pride would be hurt beyond redemption. She didn't know, wouldn't blame him if, having violated her agreement, he called in his loan. Too much of it was already spent. He'd have to take over the ranch...

And under such circumstances he would never sell to the Taylors. And Pedersen, the earnest, kindly man, what of him and his wife and their children?

And what of the ranch, incomplete, neither a cattle nor a dairy ranch.

"Pedro!" For a moment Constance rested her head against his shoulder, then lifted it. "I can't! Her voice was hoarse in its renunciation. "I can't, Pedro; that's what I have to explain. I can't tell you here, Pedro—"

"I understand already," he answered through stiff lips. "You bargained in love all right. John Raskthorne is backing you because you taught him to love you. And I have been working my fool head off to make your ranch a success because you taught me to love you, or perhaps I didn't need teaching."

"You've gone right down the line, from Judge Franck to Father. You turn on your charm until we out-do ourselves, sacrifice ourselves to help you... and for what?"

"A Wonderful Lesson"

CONSTANCE wondered if he had signaled the musicians. Only one who knew the melody would have realized they had stopped before it was complete.

Pedro took her back to her isolated corner, bowed slightly. "The shrewd little Michael Mahoney," he said.

Constance lifted her face, eyes dark with pain, pointed proudly. "Thank you, Pedro," she said. "You've taught me a wonderful lesson. I've learned just how much the love of a man can amount to."

John was with her almost before Pedro, startled, hesitating, had left.

"Chita, you're working too hard," John observed tenderly. "I'm going to pack you off to your room, and from now on you're going to mix a little play with your labor."

Constance looked at him in wonder. This, then, was John. Would John have given her up so lightly? John, who had never said, "Michael Mahoney wouldn't count a battle lost until he had been slammed into the bastille and the key was turned on him, and even then his luck might turn at the zero hour."

Constance awoke at dawn; or rather she arose at dawn after scarcely closing her eyes. She slipped quietly from the house, saddled Pancho and started out. Just ahead of her was a queer

"Lammy!"

"Miss Constance, and on a horse, now if h't 'ad a 'orse—"

"Come on, Lammy, I'll find one for you and we'll ride away and have a grand pow-wow; only quiet, we don't want anyone else, do we?"

Watching Lamson's long leg swing over the mare she'd helped him to saddle, she realized that if worst came to worst, Lamson would only have to lock his feet around the saddle girth and remain on top for eternity.

They went on a quick trot away from the stables toward the hills. Ahead of them the redwoods stood out against the rose flushed sky, choruses of birds sang hopefully for the coming of the sun, already shining on the ocean behind them.

"Now," prompted Constance, "tell me all about it; how the family decided to come out, why, and what they left behind them. And Lammy, be honest with me. I'm carrying a large load, and knowing what I have to face means so much."

"Miss Constance, h't—"

"Lammy, I have to know for their sake."

Lamson sighed. "H't was a matter of credit, Miss Constance. There wasn't any. You see, they'd gotten in the way of letting you pay the rent and groceries and they 'adn't figured the cost, and after the rent was three months due the owner suggested they move. There wasn't any place they could move save a 'otel, and the 'otels asked for an 'advance."

Cold Water

CONSTANCE nodded. "And where did they find the money to make the cross country trip?"

"Well... a... well... to be frank, Miss Constance, Mister John said 'ow 'e'd pay the way, h't they'd bring 'im."

Constance nodded. "So you stayed in the best hotels and had a grand time crossing? How did you keep up with them in my car, Lammy?"

"They stayed over 'ere and there to let me catch 'up."

"How long is Mister John intending to remain, did he say?"

"E didn't say, Miss Constance, but h't 'e 'eard 'e'd put a manager in his office and would stay on 'ere, h'ndefinitely. Mrs. Cabrillos said we'd 'ave no cause to worry 'bout expenses as long as Mister John remained."

Constance gave a short, bitter laugh. So they'd made a deal, those two, her mother and John. John would assume their expenses as long as he was at El Cabrillos. She should be relieved. She had been worrying about fifteen house guests over the week end, and plans for other parties the whole summer long.

Oh, what was the matter with her? Didn't she realize John was doing this to help her win? Couldn't she appreciate it?

She pulled upon a low summit and looked down over the ranch. Long fingers of sunlight were now touching the different centers, the low white barns, the manager's house... she looked away from that quickly... and back to the barns.

And then she looked again. The cows should be in pasture at this hour, but they weren't.

"There's a man who sits 'is saddle," Pedro Lamson proudly said. "H't say, look what 'e's doing!"

Constance was looking. Eyes wide and mouth open she was watching Pedro jump from his saddle, pull another horseman from his; take him by the back of the collar to the trough, and hold his head under it while he pumped water.

Now he was applying the toe of his boot to the drenched rider's trousers.

A second horse ambled up, the rider lolling over the saddle horn. Pedro made a lunge for him, yanked him off and dragged him to the trough.

"Come on, Lammy," she touched Pancho with her heels and Pancho sprang ahead.

She drew up at the fence, tossed Pancho's reins over his head, vaulted the fence and came up just in time to hear the last of Pedro's curses.

"What's wrong?" she asked. Pedro wheeled. "Plenty! We skip noon milking today because these hombres were drunk last night. They were celebrating the arrival of the Cabrillos. I might suggest, if this ranch means anything to you, that you do not give the keys to the wine cellar to the first man that asks for them."

"Keys... they're in my desk...!" Constance stopped and bit her lip.

"You might keep an eye on Francisco. I'll watch Manuelo. They're not fit to touch a cow, and you know what happens if an under is injured. Who is that man?"

"Lamson, our...," she lifted her chin. "The only man on God's green earth whom I trust," she stated.

"Then see if he can be trusted with cows. Does he know anything about milk; anything about anything? Every damned man on the place is sleeping it off. A fine start!"

Constance turned to Lamson. "Come, show Mr. Taylor a man who can hold his temper."

OFFICE CAT

By Junius

Considering how many people learn how to drive automobiles, it is surprising how many are unable to learn how to hold a fork when cutting meat.

An old gentleman approaching a natty attired negro at an elaborate dark-town wedding: Old negro—Pardon me, suh, is you de bridegroom?

Young negro (shaking his head dolefully)—No, suh. Ah was eliminated in de semi-finals.

Don't do so much conversational detouring before arriving at a point of interest.

Wife (complaining to her husband)—You might stay at home a little bit more. You are everlastingly driving out to play golf.

Hubby—I know, my dear, but you know the doctor told me to live on greens as much as possible.

A regular patron at taverns got on a bus and after a dozen or so jabs at the money slot started climbing the steps to the upper deck, but was halted by the conductor who remarked that he had better stay below as he might be apt to fall out if he went above.

"Say, mind your own business," blurted the man and stumbled up the steps. A few seconds later he returned down again with his face white and his hands trembling and he was confronted by the conductor who remarked, "Say, aren't you the fellow who wanted to go up on the upper deck before? What's the matter now?"

"There's nobody driving up there!" gasped the drunk.

Boggs was displaying his new sedan to Joggs: Joggs—But I thought your other car was less than a year old? You only drove it about 8,000 miles, didn't you?

Boggs—Oh, yes, it was still as good as new, but of course, it was hopelessly out of date as soon as the new and improved model came out.

Joggs—Just how is the new model different?

Boggs—Well, you can see at a glance. The automatic cigar lighter is an inch nearer the steering wheel this year.

Words have a meaning all their own: Teacher—Now, Junior, explain the difference between 'sufficient' and 'enough.'

Junior—If mother helps me to the cake I get sufficient. If I help myself, I get enough.

Placing the Blame: "I drank a quart of rock and rye," complained old Mr. Hocky.

"The rye was very good, but, my! The rock made me feel rocky."

Habits are hard to break: Ruth—So Rachael broke off her engagement with that magazine editor, did she?

John—Yes, she wrote him some love letters and he returned them with a rejection slip stating that while he was always pleased to see such things and they undoubtedly possessed merit, he was greatly overstocked with other contributions of a similar nature.

An Ideal: If you would win the prize of life, and rise above vain human strife, then set your eyes on one great goal.

And work for it with heart and soul. The men that win have one clear aim.

Without a thought of selfish fame; They pay, they toil, though rough the way. Till they attain the prize one day. If you would win the worth-while prize, There's one best way, if you are wise.

Just set your mind on one great goal. And work for it with heart and soul. —Grenville Kleiser.

Diner—Have you any wild duck? Waitress—No, but I could take a tame one and irritate it for you.

Kiwanians Hear Talk on Courts

County Judge Cook at Service Club Luncheon

Members of Kiwanis enjoyed an informative talk by County Judge Andrew J. Cook at their weekly luncheon meeting at the Governor Clinton Thursday.

Judge Cook discussed the workings of the courts generally, founded as they are on the principle embodied in the preamble to the Constitution, "justice to all."

The speaker found not to his liking the fact that in late years many of the former functions of the courts have been in effect turned over to administrative boards. The results is that of times matters which should be decided by trained legal minds are left to the tender mercies of those who have not the qualifications to handle them.

This unsatisfactory state of affairs is made worse by the fact that in instances these decisions are beyond review by properly constituted courts.

Foes of Good Nazis

Berlin (AP)—A German army officer, writing in the "Wasschauder Zeitung," advised his comrades against letting alcohol loosen their tongues, taking strange women on their arms and against becoming soft-hearted toward erstwhile foes. Although fighting with guns has ceased in France, the French still can fight with other weapons, the officer warned. One of these is espionage. Nothing was said about song.

The ancient Greeks, Romans and Egyptians considered glass more precious than gold. Today's glass prescription bottle or jar, an artistic triumph compared to the crude glass objects of ancient times, would have been priceless to them.

State Health Department Approves Sanitary Sewers for Many City Streets

The WPA project now underway on O'Neil street, and set forth reasons why that street would not be rebuilt this year. The WPA project now underway on that street called for the construction of a shallow sewer and disconnecting all house connections with the deep sewer in that street and hooking the house services up with the new shallow sewer.

The deep sewer is laid at a depth of from 18 to 20 feet in the street and it was necessary to connect the house services with it by the means of standpipes. The same condition existed for years in Henry street until a new shallow sewer was laid in that street.

The present WPA project on O'Neil street is now about 80 per cent completed. Downs street, it was stated, would be completed about November 1, and then it would be too cold to lay asphalt pavement in O'Neil street. Another reason advanced was that it would be better to give the present sewer trench in O'Neil street an opportunity to settle during the winter months so that when the new pavement was laid in the spring there would be no low spots in the street.

The board directed Secretary Winfield to forward to Corporation Counsel John M. Cashin for collection claims against Jack Reed, employed by John Benkert of Albany avenue extension, for the sum of $33.82 for damages to a light pole struck by a truck Reed was driving, and also a claim for $47 against Carl A. Rudolph, Jr., of 122 South Wall street, for damages to one of the city's traffic blinkers. The names of both men were also ordered forwarded to the state motor bureau.

Needs Dredging
Mayor Heiselman called the board's attention to the need of dredging Rondout creek at the foot of Wilbur avenue where the Twain's skill brook empties into the creek. The mayor said that the Christie Scow Corporation, which operated a boatyard on the creek at that point, were having difficulty as the brook when it emptied into the creek deposited considerable material which was filling up the creek channel in front of the boatyard.

The mayor said he had obtained a price of $500 for dredging at that point, but that the corporation counsel had advised him that the city had no right to pay the cost of dredging.

For that reason, the mayor said he had taken the matter up with the war department asking that department of the federal service to have the work done.

The mayor said he had written the necessary communications that day and that they would go forward in the mail.

New Street Progress
City Engineer James Norton, in reply to questions by the board, said that he was negotiating for the purchasing of necessary easements for the proposed new street on Locust avenue. The new street would be built through Lindsley Woods by way of Ulster street.

Several months ago part of Locust avenue was swept away in a landslide, and in order that the several houses at the other end of the street could have access in and out to their properties it was necessary to construct this new street.

Ready For Winter
Superintendent Steuding reported that the board's snow removal equipment was ready for use this winter, and that the only item of equipment necessary to purchase was chains to be used on the graders. He was directed to purchase the necessary skid chains.

Engineer's Report
City Engineer Norton reported that during August his office had been busy running lines for sewers on Dunneman Lane, and running levels for outlet sewer from the Roosevelt Park section. He had also staked out temporary storm water sewer on Wrentham street to drain Savoy street, also sanitary sewer on East Chester street along retaining wall.

In Hasbrouck Park the WPA had started construction of skating rink and storm sewer, while in Hutton Park the top course of the tennis court had been completed as well as the pavilion. Grading and excavating for wading pool, and excavating rock for water service had also been done.

Parent-Teacher Ass'n
P-T. A. No. 5
The September meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of School No. 5 was held at the school on Tuesday afternoon, September 10, at 3:30 p. m. At this time it was decided not to send delegates to the Fall Convention at Albany, October 7-10, but all officers, wishing to attend the county convention at New Paltz on October 17 will have their expenses paid.

The membership drive under direction of Mrs. Ernest Luedtke will begin immediately. It is hoped the mothers in this district will respond as usual.

A rummage sale will be held in the near future. Anyone having articles of clothing to donate may notify Mrs. Luedtke or Mrs. A. Ballard.

At the close of the meeting, a very informative talk was given by Principal A. Boyd of School No. 5, on the new form of promotion now in operation in our city schools, and also on the new type of report cards.

Picture on War Gives Americans Strong Message

One of the strongest editorial messages of the year is presented in the picture "Foreign Correspondent" now playing at the Broadway Theatre and starring Joel McCrea. The picture is more truth than propaganda and is not gushingly patriotic but its message at the end is one which sets most real Americans to cheering.

This inspiring final scene shows McCrea as the foreign correspondent talking over the radio in London. A bombing begins in the midst of his broadcast, but he sticks to the mike to give Americans a first hand idea of what is going on outside.

The lights go out as he talks 1541.

De Sota explored Arkansas in 1541.

Windmills were first used commonly in Germany.

The picture also effectively shows the treachery practiced by the fifth columnist and how their underhanded work reaches into the very homes of responsible diplomats.

Hitler, Mussolini Are Trying Most Difficult Military Moves in History

bases and communications along the continental coast where the fleet of barges and small boats is being assembled for possible invasion. That's the English game now—to smash concentrations of boats, supplies and troops, and disrupt rail communications.

Word from Berlin is that Herr Hitler is "biding his own time" for his supreme blow and "won't be hurried." That goes without saying if you know der fuhrer. He is a law unto himself—"the law," to be more accurate—and his word alone controls all vital operations.

Speculation as to when, if at all, the invasion may come is futile. It is interesting to note, however, that there is a full moon next week, and that Wednesday will give England its highest tide of the period. Both these are held by many experts to be favorable for the operation.

The Nazi bombing of Buckingham Palace with the king and queen in residence was a staggering incident of the conflict. There are few things which would do more to spur the British people to resistance than this.

The Nazi government has said that this was accidental. So probably would the British characterize the dropping of a bomb the other day near Hitler's chancellery in Berlin. The question arises in many minds however, as to whether chivalry is disappearing from the fighting man's code.

One can't help recalling the record of Germany's greatest air hero—the gallant Baron Von Richthofen who lost his life in combat during the World War. This daredevil flyer would tack his crimson plane onto the tail of an enemy machine and chase it right over its own trenches close to the ground. But let his opponent suffer such an accident as the jamming of a machine-gun, thus depriving him of his defensive weapon, and Richthofen would dip his plane in salute and allow his crippled foe to ride away.

I was on the Somme when the baron was shot down, and the allies gave this universally admired flyer a magnificent tribute to chivalry and sportsmanship.

Mussolini's share of this drama—the battle of the Mediterranean—is for control of that inland sea which Britain now definitely holds and Il Duce seeks. The destinies of both empires are largely dependent on free access to these blue waters which represent one of the great cross-roads of the world.

For England the defense of this life-line is well-nigh as vital as is the winning of the battle of Britain. For Italy, domination would mean expansion and great power. Possession of Egypt alone would bring vast wealth in its cotton, grains and minerals—not to mention its strategic value.

Mussolini's position isn't wholly enviable. He was pretty well prepared for a fast and furious fight when he entered the war, but not for a protracted engagement. His weakness is his vulnerability to naval blockade, and the fact that he is up against this in a big way.

Not only is Italy itself reported to be exceedingly short of many essential supplies, but her water communications with her African possessions and arms are virtually severed by the powerful British fleets. England's control of the sea threatens Mussolini with strangulation, and her continued resistance to the supposedly invincible Hitlerian attack undoubtedly is a matter of grave concern to the Italian leader.

FASHIONS and HOUSEHOLD HINTS FOR WOMEN

When You Buy a Hat or Dress, Have a Little Talk Thrown In

By AMY PORTER
AP Fashion Writer

You can, if you like, buy conversation along with your new clothes this fall.

Stores are full of trick items they call "conversation pieces," intended to break the ice in any gathering by starting you off with a lively bit of small talk.

For instance, there is the peace pipe a designer has attached to one of his best-looking hats. We overheard a conversation inspired by this piece the other day. It went like this:

"Excuse me, but what's that thing on your hat?"

"That? Oh, that's a peace pipe. You know, like the Indians smoked."

"Oh, What's it there for?"

"It's a conversation piece. You know, to start a conversation with."

"Oh."

Then to the weather

From there the conversation went on briskly to the weather.

Then there was the lapel ornament conversation which broke the ice for a group of four women. Here's the transcription:

"What's that on your lapel?"

"That's a branding iron. From a western ranch. Lazy Bar X, it is."

"Oh. Did you visit a cattle ranch?"

"No, I just thought it was a cute pin."

"Oh."

On your next country week-end you might try out the Bavarian conversation-piece socks. They are in four pieces, arranged to show alternate layers of bare leg and wool. First, socks, then bare ankle, then, around the calf, another separate band of wool. Guaranteed to start conversation.

In Hats, Too

Then there's that new black pillbox turban meant for blondes. It has a hole the size of a 50-cent piece right on top, and you pull a couple of blonde curls through the hole. The effect is a conversation piece of the most effective kind.

Someone's sure to say, "Look, there's something the matter with your hat. Did you know?"

You laugh, and say there's nothing the matter with your hat, it's a conversation piece, that's all.

You see the possibilities. Start with a conversation piece and you can end anywhere.

My Country!—It's In Style

Patriotism in any form is this fall's best seller.

In women's clothes, women's jewelry, women's hats, in lipsticks and scarfs, patriotism is an epidemic.

Little girls wear pinafores embroidered with "God Bless America." Satin negligees bear the strange device "Vive L'Amérique."

Buttons, belts, ear-rings, compacts are liberally sprinkled with shields, flags and the letters "U. S. A."

From many a lapel an eagle screams.

Disguise yourself as a black-haired siren in this "Toupee Feminine." These are Walter Florell "conversation pieces."

MODES of the MOMENT

Patriotism does fashion a good turn in this jacket costume called "Valley Forge." Virginia Rhines designed it in cadet blue.

Curry gives the different flavor to meats.

Curry For Dinner

Serving 3 or 4

Veal Curry Condiment Tray

Toasted Rolls Currant Jam

Veal Curry

1 pound cubed veal (lean)

4 tablespoons bacon fat

1/2 cup chopped onions

Brown the veal in the fat which has been heated in a frying pan.

Add the onions, celery and seasonings. Cook for five minutes over a low heat. Add the water. Cover and let simmer for about 45 minutes—until the veal is very tender.

(More water may be needed, so inspect frequently.) Mix in the curry and butter and cook several minutes. Then add the flour and milk. Cook slowly until thick and creamy. Let stand an hour or so to develop the flavors. Reheat and serve on the rice. Pass a condiment trayful of chopped roasted peanuts, chutney sauce, chopped hard-cooked eggs and coconut.

Criff Stages Raid in Slot Machines

Criff Molyneux's office looked the storage room of a slot machine factory this morning. One of the rooms was piled with so-called "diggers" or "crane" machines—20 of them in all—seized last night at the card which has been showing on the wall, across the viaduct, week.

Complaint had been made to the city last Thursday night that the machines were being operated. At 10 o'clock last night the city and half a dozen deputies went to the field and seized the machines, which he said were being operated in two booths, located at different points on the viaduct.

Three men who were charged with operating the machines were taken under arrest and arraigned before Justice Percy Bush of the city. They pleaded not guilty and were held under $500 each for a hearing Monday morning.

Financial and Commercial

Most Commodity Markets Quiet

Traders Continue to Ignore
Indications of Better Business

Traders Friday continued to ignore indications of favorable domestic business, of which defense activity is a large factor and with dealings on the Exchange down to 268,180 shares, lowest for any day so far this month, stocks closed slightly lower. The Dow-Jones industrial average was off slightly, 13 point, to 127.74, making the seventh consecutive day in which a drop has been registered. Utilities also were off, closing at 21.65, a loss of 23 point for the day. Rains were an exception and moved up fractionally to 27.70.

Warren Bros., a low-priced stock, led the active list and gained 3-8 in turnover of 8,500 shares. American Radiator, N. Y. Central and U. S. Steel were next on the active list, in order, all up slightly for the day.

Most commodity markets were quiet Friday and the close was irregularly lower. Wheat moved in narrow range and futures closed with little change. Cotton also was little changed, closing one lower to one higher. World and domestic sugar futures were a bit firmer.

As a result of the air raids trading on the London market was reduced to about one hour, but dealings were not restricted and there was no widening of quotations after the raids. During the fighting inter-office dealings in British funds were continued over the telephone.

Domestic sales by leading office equipment manufacturers continue to run from 10 to 30 per cent above a year ago, the gain more than offsetting loss of important export markets. Expected that earnings for the current year will be at the highest level since 1937.

A dispatch says that International Telephone & Telegraph may lose more than $100,000 worth of property in Transylvania, Rumanian province recently ceded to Hungary.

Auto production rose sharply this week and is estimated at 62,240 units. Scheduled to gain steadily till a level of around 100,000 weekly is reached.

Tillson Resident Held for Attempt To Resist Arrest

Frank Bladegreen, 50, of Tillson, waived examination this morning in police court and was held to await grand jury action on a charge of resisting arrest.

Judge Matthew V. Cahill informed Bladegreen that he would be fixed by the county judge. Bladegreen was arrested about 3:50 o'clock this morning on Henry street, near Schryver Court, by Officers Kinch and Crosswell on a charge of operating an automobile while intoxicated. The grand jury charge was the outcome of the officers arresting Bladegreen on the driving while intoxicated charge.

The Tillson man entered a plea of guilty to driving while intoxicated and Judge Cahill imposed a fine of $50 and revoked Bladegreen's operator's license.

According to the police report Bladegreen put up a battle when placed under arrest and both struck and kicked at Officer Kinch.

Plymouth Cars Are on Display at Parrott Motor Co.

The new 1941 Plymouth cars are on display at the Parrott Motor Company, 527-531 Broadway, where Malcolm Parrott local Chrysler dealer, invites an inspection.

Mr. Parrott returned to Kingston recently from a pre-viewing of Chrysler cars which took place at Mackinac Island, where the new 1941 models were first displayed to Chrysler dealers.

Distributors and direct dealers and their wives were guests of the Chrysler Sales Division on the annual introduction cruise from Detroit. The party numbering about 1,000, boarded the steamer "Greater Detroit" at Detroit on Thursday and returned last Sunday to Detroit from the cruise to Mackinac Island, where the new models were shown in the Grand Hotel on Friday.

The guests were entertained during the cruise and there was a program of sports and social affairs, including a banquet with an address by Prof. John Caton, of the Chrysler Institute of Engineering.

Plymouth for 1941 announced 19 great advancements, including a new fashion tone interior and the new powermatic shifting which gives vast reductions in driving effort. Power and performance has been stepped up through improvements to motor and by use of a new transmission and axle ratio which makes available the additional power in a usable way. Another change has been the introduction of new safety rims which prevent throwing off of tire in case of blowout or puncture.

A new oil bath air cleaner protects the engine from dust and grit and prolongs the life of the powerplant. The introduction of a new type motor bearing increases the life of vital bearings two or three times usual life.

For 1941 Plymouth has a one piece hood with inside lock which is fastened from the driver's seat. Springs are covered and the front coil springs of a new type give greatest riding comfort.

Plymouth for 1941 is a bigger, roomier, more powerful car with numerous of the latest developments for economy and long life. Plymouth dealers invite the public to inspect the new line of 1941.

Julia Cook, daughter of County Judge Andrew J. Cook, who was appointed clerk of Children's Court several weeks ago to succeed Miss Mildred Townsley, who held that position under the late Judge Frederick G. Traver, it is rumored will resign the position of clerk of Children's Court to accept an appointment in the attorney general's office at Albany.

Miss Cook, an attorney and member of the Ulster County Bar, was appointed by her father as clerk when Miss Townsley resigned and has since filled that office. Who her successor will be has not been ascertained.

Bomb Fragments

London, Sept. 14 (AP)—Air raid wardens and auxiliary firemen, on the lookout for time bombs dropped by Nazi air raiders, roped off a section of park in which they discovered a hole in the ground about a foot across.

Then they retreated to see what would happen.

Three hours later a foot popped a family of rabbits.

Everybody in London who hasn't got one is trying to buy a "barage bowl"—a tin hat. However, the stores are sold out and the ministry supply has requisitioned all available stocks for soldiers, sailors, ARP workers, nurses and doctors.

Shell splinters on the streets are "pennies from Heaven" to cockney boys, who sell them to souvenir hunters.

Residents of a north London area are trying to get a Boy Scout bagpipe band ousted from its practice hall because they mistake the skirls for sirens, but the Scoutmaster is standing firm.

"The music of the pipes helps more than anything else in times like these," he argues.

Overheard when bombs started to fall:
"Hug the wall," said the first man.
"Save your breath," said the second man. "I'm practically a mural now."

Britain Faces Big Peril in 48 Hours

outside world free of axis domination.

The French were described as expressing no eagerness for closer contact with their conquerors but hopeful that union of the presently divided country would improve their condition.

At Vichy, the Petain government met last night to study the question of food substitutes. The French press began preparing the nation for severe restrictions as the full import of the $8,000,000 daily cost of maintaining the German army of occupation was brought home.

The travelers asserted the Germans virtually have emptied the unoccupied zone of reserve stores of food and such merchandise as textiles and rubber.

The Germans alone are able to move goods, for there is no regular rail service, and only the German military authorities have the gasoline to operate truck transports.

Although Frenchmen still feel that Britain left them down in the battle of northern France, the travelers said, the feeling is growing in France that only a British victory will assure France's future national existence.

Letters Tell Hard Life in Holland Since Nazis Came

Three letters received recently from Holland by Cornelius Bach, retired New York restaurant man who now lives at 126 West Pierpont street, present a brief but significant picture of what has happened since Nazi forces advanced westward using that small, peaceful nation as a gateway for the summer's biggest blitzkrieg.

Perhaps some of the things in these letters, Mr. Bach suggested, will help end the grumblings of some Americans who find conditions not exactly to their liking here.

One of the letters came to this country apparently untouched by the censors, but the other two bore a swastika to indicate they had passed censorship.

Even the latter, however, contained some surprising revelations as to what is happening now in the Netherlands.

One letter from a nephew of Mr. Bach, compared conditions now with those of a year ago when Mr. Bach was there for a visit and all of them stressed the fact that Holland is sharing the hardships now widespread in Europe.

"Quite a few things have happened since you went back to the States," begins the one letter. It gives among these things a picture of Amsterdam which has been leveled by Nazi bombs.

The nephew recalled a visit to Heck's restaurant in Amsterdam with Mr. Bach before he and Mrs. Bach sailed back to America last year.

"There is nothing left in that part of the city now," the nephew wrote, "only great heaps of debris and here and there a single house still standing. You are able to look now over that whole section clear across the Maas river without anything to obstruct the view."

Another letter reveals the anxiety shared by thousands of families in Europe today in a paragraph which begins, "For the last few nights we have been able to sleep easier, but before that quite often we gathered up our things of value and were ready to leave on quick notice."

Stressed above everything else in all of the letters is the system of rationing which followed Nazi conquest of the country. Food and clothing is given out under a plan which allows a limited number of points to each person and they get no more when this limitation is reached.

Each family is allowed only a pound of coffee for a month and an ounce of tea. Butter and other foods are distributed on a similar basis and in order for any person to get a pair of new shoes he must show proof that he has no other serviceable shoes to wear.

Only 100 points are allowed a year to each person for clothing and if that person were to buy a complete costume or suit 70 of these 100 points would be used in a single purchase.

One of the letters which compare what Mr. Bach saw a year ago to what he would see today tells of the nightly blackouts throughout the nation. It is not always dark, however, the letter states, since many communities are often lighted up "like day" when the English planes fly over and drop flares.

Mr. and Mrs. Bach left for Holland September 28, 1939, to visit Mr. Bach's sister and brother who were ill at the time and they remained six months before returning to America.

Saugerties and Recs Are Ready for First Series Game Sunday

Season's Big Clash Will Start Off at Municipal Stadium

Charlie Neff and Ed Wallace will be on the hill. Game will be started at 3 P. M.

The battle of all battles will start Sunday afternoon at municipal stadium when Charlie Neff and Ed Wallace are expected to be on the hill. Both flingers represent some of the finest mound workers in this section.

Until late Friday afternoon both managers were mum as to their pitching choices but at game time Charlie Neff, the speed-ball merchant from New Paltz, and Big Eddie Wallace are expected to be on the hill. Both flingers represent some of the finest mound workers in this section.

As far as the season's averages go the Saugerties flinger presents the better record. Wallace, who formerly toiled with Fred Davis's Colonials a year or so ago, has been very effective against all kinds of opposition this season. On the other hand, Neff has been experiencing a disappointing campaign.

With Neff starting as a question mark Manager Husta will have Bob "Jumbo" Bush and Howie Brooks, a lefthander, ready to go in case of any emergency. Both Bush and Brooks have come through nicely for Kingston this year. On the Saugerties bull pen roster is Ed Rosenstein, another effective flinger, who should give the Recreationists trouble when he starts.

Pitchers Important
As expected the mound workers will be the difference of victory and defeat in this extended three-game series. Neither club can be classified as a powerful combination which merely puts Neff and Wallace in a spot all by themselves. If they fail anything is liable to happen—and it probably will.

Last Sunday afternoon Saugerties eked out an 8 to 7 win over Charlie Neff's Recreationists from Newburgh. The C's last battle, Kingston, still in the grip of a losing streak, was checked 6 to 0 by the Paterson Silk Sox. However, the victory and defeat doesn't mean very much. Both teams are ready to go to the limit for the final decision of supremacy.

Coming into municipal stadium tomorrow afternoon with the Saugerties crew will be a number of players quite familiar with Kingston spectators. Earl "Gaby" Benjamin, "Bing" Van Etten, Charlie Francello, Rivenberg and Ed Wallace have all seen action against the Colonial City team before. Desmond, Keenan and Swart aren't considered any strangers either.

Grudge on Tap
If for no other reason a few of the village players would like to settle an argument of their ability to perform better than a number of the Recs. "Bing" Van Etten and Charlie Francello were two of the athletes in line for a position with Carl Husta's team but they never made it. It's a sure thing now that at least one face is going to be pretty red if these Saugerties cohorts come through with sparkling performances against Kingston as they have against other clubs throughout the season.

While Manager Al Schultz boasts of a stellar Saugerties club, on the other hand he concedes him, the local ball club hasn't been having very low this year either. The Recreationists have come up against some of the best road teams in the country and have displayed some very good baseball. Of course, the Recs have looked a little shaky at times but all good clubs take on this appearance once in a while.

According to official word from Saugerties quite a few of the village fans are planning to take in this first series game at the stadium. Already plenty of local baseball lovers have looked forward to this battle-royal and judging from their response to the scheduling of the games, they wouldn't miss it.

So now it's just a matter of sitting back and waiting for the expected battle to be dropped between these two clubs meet tomorrow afternoon at municipal stadium at 3 o'clock sharp. One of the best turnouts of the season is expected to jam the gates.

Series Dates Are Decided at Confab Of Major Leagues

Games Will Start in the National League City; 171 Players Will Be Ready for Action

As all baseball watched the closest pennant battle in the American League's 40-year history, the opening date of the 1940 world series was fixed Friday as Wednesday, October 2, in the home park of the team winning more than in the past.

This announcement was given as a result of a meeting held before Baseball Commissioner Kenealy Landis, attended by representatives of five American League clubs and two from the National League.

As it stands now the first two games will be played in either Cincinnati or Brooklyn. Then the scene will shift to the American League park for the third and fourth, and fifth, if necessary. If the last two games of the four-out-of-seven series are necessary, they will be played in the home park of the National League.

Start at 1:30
All games will start at 1:30 o'clock, standard time. If either the Yankees or Red Sox represent the American League against Cincinnati, one day will be allowed for travel between the second and third games. No travel days will be required provided Detroit, Cleveland or Chicago is the American League representative.

At yesterday's meeting the largest number of players certified as eligible for world series competition, 171, was named. Five clubs, Detroit, Cleveland, Boston, Cincinnati and Brooklyn, named 22 and 24 respectively.

William Harridge, president of the American League, was not at the session but was represented by L. C. McEvoy, President Ford Frick of the National League represented his loop and the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Other club representatives included Detroit, Walter O. (Spike) Briggs and Harry Griffith; Chicago, Harry Grabner; Boston, Phil Troy; New York, Ed Barrow and Charles McManus; Cleveland, Alva Bradley; Cincinnati, Warren Giles.

DARK HORSE

Newcomer Wins From Ray Billows In Amateur Golf

McCullough, Jr., Keeps on With His Good Play; Will Meet Chapman for Golf Crown

Mamaroneck, N. Y., Sept. 14 (AP)—A couple of young gentlemen who were born with silver brassies in their mouths, and who teed off on two-inch golf club steaks, met politely on the Winged Foot course today in the 36-hole final match for the national amateur championship.

Neither Richard Chapman of Greenwich, Conn., nor Warrington Bannerman McCullough, Jr., of Philadelphia, ever caddied a day in his life. Neither of them even is from "across the tracks" but they were in the final today, Dick and "Duff."

"Duff" got his nickname as a youngster from his father, the head of a notable Philadelphia golfing family. When "Duff" was just a sprat, learning to hit the ball with his shiny new clubs, the elder McCullough would come home and ask: "Well, how is the young duffer coming along?"

Though he has been deadly serious about golf for the last 16 years, "Duff" never entirely made his mark until yesterday, when he obliterated Ray Billows of Poughkeepsie, 5 and 3, in a 36-hole semi-final.

Some of the boys still were contending last night that it was all a mistake, and that "Duff" couldn't possibly have beaten Billows, who had been an amateur finalist in two of the last three years. But the score board disclosed that the rank outsider shot approximately par golf for 33 holes on a tough course.

Whoever wins today, it will be a new experience for him, more or less. McCullough's best previous victory was in the Pennsylvania amateur championship. Chapman has won the French amateur title and the New York state crown, while three times reaching the quarter-finals of the British amateur.

Catsup on Ice Cream
Aberdeen, S. D. (AP)—Managing Editor Jack Bailey decided it would be good column material when Vern Holton, his dinner guest, sprinkled salt, not sugar, into his coffee. "Absent-minded guest..." Bailey already had his gag line in mind. Holton looked up. "I just like it better this way," he said.

The Tower of London once housed a menagerie.

Benjamin, Ed Esposito, Jack Short and Billy Ball are planted, ready to give Kingston an air-tight secondary. All of these athletes are experienced in their respective positions. Aside from these Coach Weems should come up with a number of other prospects.

The line forces present another enjoyable topic for Weems and his aides to discuss. Players like Al Nock, Bob Messenger, Bob Brown, Nick Lemister, Fred Hauer, Mark Kachigan, Jim Collins, John Ellsworth and the rest all seem to fit in perfectly with the Maroon and White cause.

Tom Bridges Beats Yanks For an 8-0 Detroit Victory; Indians Down Red Sox, 1-0

Bengals' Eighth Win in Last Nine Contests; Al Milnar Allows Sox Three Hits

(By The Associated Press)
For a team of "nine old men" that seemed destined to suffer from the altitude if it got higher than fifth place in the American League, the Detroit Tigers seem surprisingly spry.

Tagged last spring as an outfit that definitely had looked upon better days, the Tigers today are the hottest—if not the best—team in the American League.

Twice they have stopped the New York Yankees, the last time yesterday by a humiliating 8-0 shutout as little Tommy Bridges curve-balled the Yanks into helplessness. That was the Tigers' eighth victory in the last nine times out and the fifth straight win over their two toughest foes, the Indians and the Yankees.

Bridges was touched for three solid blows in the first two innings, but after that the Yankees didn't get a man past first base. The Tigers pounded out 16 hits, including Hank Greenberg's 33rd homer, to hand Marius Russo his first defeat in his last eight starts.

Five Hits in Game
Meanwhile the second place Cleveland Indians stayed close to the Tigers as Al Milnar and Boston's young Jim Bagby hooked up in the day's finest pitching duel. Milnar's three hitter won out by a 1-0 score over Bagby's two hitter because the Indians bunched singles by Roy Weatherly and Jeff Heath, so that Weatherly scored the only run while a double play was erasing Heath.

The only blows off Milnar, who has now won 16 and lost 8, were singles by Jimmy Fox, Joe Cronin and Roger Cramer.

The Chicago White Sox crept into fourth place by running their victory string to five straight with a pair of victories over the Athletics, 6-2 and 8-4. The Sox relied on steady pitching by Thornton Lee and Jack Hallett, a right-hander making his major league debut.

Steuding, Mikesh Are Given Leaves

Oppenheimer Will Assume Superintendent's Duties in City D. P. W.

Captain Ernest A. Steuding, commanding officer of Battery A of the 156 Field Artillery, and Lieutenant John J. Mikesh of the same unit, were granted leaves of absence by the Board of Public Works on Friday afternoon as both men will be mustered into federal military service on Monday. Captain Steuding is superintendent of the board while Lieut. Mikesh is employed as an engineering assistant in the office of the city engineer's office.

The leaves of absence were granted by the board at the written request of both men. Assistant Superintendent Max Oppenheimer will take over the duties of Superintendent Steuding until such time as the board finds a suitable man to appoint in charge it was announced at the meeting.

Mayor Heiselman, who presided expressed the sentiment of the entire board when he said that the board was sorry to see Captain Steuding leave as he had proven a most efficient superintendent. The mayor called attention to Captain Steuding's military training and said that if the "U. S. Army is smart it would retain the services of Captain Steuding during the present emergency had passed."

Captain Steuding's letter asking leave of absence follows:

September 9, 1940
The Honorable C. J. Heiselman, Mayor, Comm. Board of Public Works, City of Kingston, N. Y. Gentlemen:

According to General Orders No. 35, the State of New York, Division of Military and Naval Affairs of the Executive Department, the Adjutant General's Office, Albany, New York dated September 4, 1940 the 156th Field Artillery, New York National Guard of which I am an officer has been ordered into Federal service by the President of the United States as of September 16, 1940.

This order of course makes it impossible for me to continue for the present in my capacity as Superintendent of the Department of Public Works. I therefore request leave of absence.

I would like at this time to express my most sincere appreciation to the Mayor, the Commissioners of the Board of Public Works, the Employees of the Department of Public Works, and all other Departments of the City Government for the cooperation they have given me as Superintendent, and to all others who have contributed toward making my period of service most pleasant. Further I would like to state that I have considered it both an honor and a privilege to have been a member of the official family of this present Government of the City of Kingston.

Respectfully submitted,

Ernest A. Steuding
Supt. D. P. W.

Gets Big Rattler

G. F. Edson, observer at the Gallis Hill fire tower, not only observes fire conditions but also keeps a close watch on the surroundings of his cabin. A three foot rattlesnake which now hangs from the fire tower is proof of his keen observation. The rattler bears nine rattles and is the first Mr. Edson has ever seen during eleven years service at the fire observation tower.

Senate Votes Power Over Factories

dent had placed a defense order, the manufacturer should accept it at a price declared to be "reasonable" by the secretary of war or the secretary of navy.

If the manufacturer declined to give the government preference on this order, or refused to fill it, the government could step in and operate the plant, paying "fair and just" compensation. The manufacturer would be subject to maximum penalties of three years imprisonment and $50,000 fine.

This provision contrasted with the committee's compromise version which opponents assailed as "vague" and "unenforceable." That would have authorized the government to take over plants only if the secretary of war or the secretary of navy certified that the public necessity was immediate and there was no other source of supply.

Russell Leads Fight

Senator Russell (D-Ga.) co-author with Senator Overton (D-La.) of the original senate section discarded by the conferees, led the fight which resulted in the senate vote.

Gleefully, such opponents of conscription as Senators Wheeler (D-Mont.), Clark (D-Mo.) and Norris (Ind-Neb.) jumped into the battle on Russell's side. Aligned with them were such staunch supporters as Senators Lee (D-Okla.) and O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.).

Against these, however, Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, Senator Burke (D-Neb.), a co-author of the bill, and Overton all argued that the conference amendment was better than either that had gone before it, and threatened, in fact, more drastic curbs on what they called "chiselers" in industry.

Barkley combined a defense of the provision with a plea for speed in acceptance of the compromise bill.

Despite this effort by the leadership, administration forces divided on the vote, with such senators as Byrnes (D-SC), Green (D-RI), Guffey (D-Pa.), McKellar (D-Tenn.), Schwellenbach (D-Wash.), Wagner (D-NY) and Lee supporting the move to send the report back to committee.

On the other hand, only three Republicans, Capper of Kansas, Johnson of California, and Wiley of Wisconsin voted for the motion. Senator McNary of Oregon, the minority leader and Republican vice-presidential nominee, led a contingent of 10 Republicans voting against it in support of Barkley's position.

the joint army and navy selective service committee.

Vital Statistics

The registrant's vital statistics—birth date, race and the like and his description will be entered upon a card when he registers, and he will be given a smaller, similar registration certificate which says, "Carry this card with you at all times."

The questionnaire will come next; then, classification; and, finally, the draft itself.

Personal information and that on dependents, court records, and such will be kept confidential.

Among the questions are these: Have you any physical defects? What is your usual occupation? Weekly wage or income? State your relation to agriculture.

How many persons are doing the same kind of work that you are, in the plant where you work? To what country do you owe allegiance?

Scalise Is Found Guilty of Stealing

next day he resigned as president of the union.

His arrest was directed by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey. On May 29, a grand jury indicted Scalise on charges of larceny, forgery and embezzlement involving $60,087.27 of union funds. It was on this 60-count indictment that he went to trial August 12.

Today's verdict was the result. The grand larceny conviction was on a count accusing him of appropriating $2,857 of union funds on deposit in the Sterling National Bank of New York last March 29. The forgery counts of which he was convicted accused him of falsifying the records of the union by submitting four criminally erroneous monthly expense statements for June and October of 1937, February, 1938, and August, 1939.

Sentence September 27

Judge Jacob Gould Schurman remanded Scalise to Tombs prison until September 27, when sentence will be pronounced. The defendant received the jury's verdict with the same calm he maintained throughout the five-week trial.

As a youth, Scalise served 4½ years in prison after conviction on a federal white slavery charge.

Scalise was arrested after Westbrook Pegler, newspaper columnist, in his writings had accused the union leader of labor racketeering.

When detectives pulled Scalise from his hotel bed to lead him off to Tombs prison, Scalise remarked:

"I have been Peglerized."

The union which Scalise headed is composed principally of scrubwomen, chambermaids, elevator operators, porters and window cleaners.

WORKERS KILLED IN POWDER PLANT BLAST

Here's where workers were killed and scores were injured when a series of explosions literally blew the Hercules Powder Company plant off the map at Kenvil, N. J., 30 miles northwest of metropolitan New York city. Some estimates set the tentative death toll at 50. The plant was busy with numerous national defense contracts, having accepted $40,000,000 in contracts from the federal government in the last three months. Early estimates put the damage at $2,000,000. A naval ammunition depot is at Lake Denmark, seven miles away. The injured were taken to Dover Hospital. Photo shows an airview of the wreckage.

HOME WRECKED BY POWDER PLANT BLAST

When a series of heavy explosions literally blew the Hercules Powder Company plant at Kenvil, N. J., off the map, the blast smashed windows and damaged nearby homes. Above is the home of B. A. McLaughlin, located some distance away from the plant, showing the damage done by the blast. A neighbor, Ann Chipko, surveys the room.

Dr. Goodwin Talks On Jewish Farmer

Men's Club Hears Address at Local Meeting

On Wednesday evening, September 11, the Kingston Jewish Men's Club under the chairmanship of Raphael Kline, met at the home of Moe Solomon on Conway Place at 8:30 o'clock. After a short business meeting the club had a talk on the Jewish farmers by Dr. Goodwin of the Jewish Agricultural Society.

Dr. Goodwin pointed out in part that there had been Jewish farmers throughout the ages, even after the destruction of Palestine in 70 of the present era; and although it became increasingly difficult for the wandering Jew to stay on the soil because of his unsafe and uncertain habitat in the face of persecution, a famous monk pointed out that after the expulsion in 1492, many of the Spanish farms had become neglected because the Jewish husbandmen were no longer there to take care of them.

For hundreds of years most Jews were driven off the soil by their enemies. In America from the earliest times there had been Jews on the farm in small movements. Dr. Goodwin pointed out that in colonial times there are records of Jewish farmers and that in this country the first Jew colony of Shalom was settled more than a hundred years ago but was doomed to failure because of the poor land and the hardships of the inexperienced farmers.

Dr. Goodwin indicated that we need more Jewish farmers on the land and that it is an error to say that there are no successful agriculturists among Jews. Some of the best dairy farms and in fact some of the best farmers in the country are Jewish, not to speak of the numerous agricultural scientists at the universities and in the various research bureaus.

Dr. Goodwin concluded with the plea that Jews return to the land here and in that way lessen the concentration of Jews in a few professions, like law, medicine and business. Farming, he said, is a traditional Jewish occupation dating from the activities of our forefathers in Palestine; and although it has been interrupted throughout the intervening centuries, it has never ceased to exercise the minds and bodies of a number of our best people.

The next meeting of the Men's Club will be held at the home of Arthur B. Ewig.

Isle, Vt. He was a halfback on the championship Yale team of 1892 and coached for two seasons at West Point after graduating from the Yale Law School in 1894. Graves was an attorney in New York city for many years.

EXPLOSION HURTS HIM AND HIS HOME

James Henderson, employee of the Hercules Powder Company, was among those injured at Kenvil, N. J., when the Powder Company plant, busy with large preparedness contracts for the federal government, blew up. Henderson was given emergency treatment at a hospital and he went home to find it damaged from the blast.

Willkie Is Given Rousing Reception In Chicago's Loop

fense program, and opposition to political "bosses."

At the end of a 75-mile auto trip through the industrial sections of the nation's second largest city, Willkie expressed pleasure last night over his reception.

Estimating that he had seen "almost a million citizens," he said friends had told him that more people were jammed into the loop district than at any time since the welcome for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh after his transatlantic flight in 1927.

A shower of ticket tape and torn telephone books greeted the candidate in the business district, where crowds broke through police lines and repeatedly stopped his 40-car procession. Mrs. Willkie, standing beside her husband, tossed roses to the surging crowd from two big bouquets.

Willkie wore a broad smile and waved both arms during his city tour but his face was serious when he gave his impromptu talks. The last of these came at dusk to a gathering in a negro ball park.

"At every opportunity," Willkie told the crowd, "I have struck at all types of intolerance that have come my way. The negro people are entitled to every right that every other citizen is entitled to."

"If elected, I will see that the relief is continued—without discrimination—until we can get the wheels of industry started."

In all his talks he declared that his election would mean "more and more jobs, and as the years go on, higher and higher wages."

Willkie told a gathering near the Carnegie-Illinois steel plant that the country "cannot go strong through a process of spending and wasting more money."

"Do you want spinach or work?" he shouted.

There was a cry of "work!" from some in the audience.

Among the crowd were a few persons carrying signs reading: "Steel workers want Roosevelt and Wallace."

Group May Rule On Roosevelt Trip

He and other Republican spokesmen have asserted that the presidential trip, from Hyde Park, N. Y., into the Tennessee Valley area, was part of a "political campaign for re-election. Democratic leaders have maintained that the President's speech, dedicating Great Smoky Mountains National Park and the Chickamauga Dam on the Tennessee river were "non-political."

Considerable interest attached also to the senate committee's inquiry into alleged "padding" of registration lists in Hudson county, Democratic stronghold of Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, N. J., and the Republican stronghold of Wilmington.

Gillette said the investigators' reports showed "startling conditions."

"If these are a true picture, they certainly would force the committee to take some specific direct action for their immediate correction," the senator said.
